THE MOSQUITOES OF ARCTIC

In a work recently published in Lon-don—"The Land of the North Wind, or Travol among the Laplanders and the Samoyedes, —the author, Edward Roc, gives the following account of the Arctic mosquitoes, which makes us almost content with our own:

"The one bitter drop in our cup of joy was the monstrous but inseparable curse of Arctic summer life-the mosquito. He abounded, flourished, luxu riated, surpassed himself,out-mosquiteed himself, on the Kuloi River. We were at his mercy; our veils, gauntlots, handkerchiefs, flapper, all were a vanity and vexation. To kill was wan-ton, for to destroy sufficient was impossible. We had foreseen all this, and even thought of taking, among other things, a woodpecker, from home, to protect our face while we slept; but one woodpeeker would have been a suienin mockery; we should have wanted a fresh woodpecker every five minutes. I suppose these were the historical flies sont to punish the disobedient, obstinato Egyptians; they came forth in order, and after three grievous plagues —the corruption of the waters, the multitude of frogs, and the swarms of lice—had entirely failed. We are be coming connoisseurs in mosquitoes; we watch them traverse our veils like figures on slidos in a magic lantera. There is the yellow striped vampire mosquito, with a triple fang to his proboscis; there is the brown, hunchback or caniel mesquite, with legs of gossa mer, who appears to our vindictive oyes to be from two to three inches in length; finally, there is the scorpion mosquite, very searching and business like. We dislike him greatly, for he wastes no time. We know that leather is a hollow delusion, and armor-plated gauntlets are alone of avail."

MUST NOT DO IT.

An American missionary among the Yellowstone Indians undertook to convince them that polygamy was wrong. One chief combatted theiden by saying: "Tell the priest that if he wishes to do anything with my people, he must not tell them to put away their wives. I have eight, all of whom I love, and who all luve children by me—which am I to keep and which put away? Tell those who have only one wife not putting away wives already married."

This chief, however, injured the moral force of his remarks by going on saw that his eight wives could dress a hundred and fifty skins in the yearwhoreas, a single wife could only dress ten, supposing she were always well, and that such a loss of property was not to be thought of. He also told the priest not to object to run drinking, as the love of it formed part of the very nature of his people.

"Yes, you may come again next Sunday ovening, Horace, dear; but,"—and she hesitated. "But what, darling?" he asked. "But next time please don't wear one of these cellars with the points turning outward-they

A red-haired lady who was ambitious of literary destinction, found but a poor sale for her book. A gentleman in speaking of her disappointment, said: "Her hair is red, if her book is not." An auditor, in attempting to relate the joke elsewhere, said: "She has red hair if her book hasan't."

"What are ye dancing around fur?" inquired a boot black yesterday of a boy acquaintance whose face was covered with smiles, and who was executing a double-shuffle. "Glory 'nuff for one day!" replied the lad, jumping still higher, "cow got into the garden this morning and tramped every bed as flat as your hat, and I won't have to pull a veed this summer!" DEAD BEATS "BOUNCED." A Lively Row Results-Marshal Haworth Interferes.

Yesterday afternoon at about 2 o'clock

two notorious dead-beats stalked into the

what the prospect of making a fortune | the "beat" order, went up to them and at digging for the precious metal. Many politely requested them to pay in advance for their dinner. They at first precedence of the famous Black Hills flatly refused, and after a good deal of hallowing, one of the two hauled out a dime and said he thought that was sufficient to pay for the "square meal" they raison quite a disturbance on the west had ordered. Here occurred a difference side of the old square. Some of the of opinion, and a few moments later the friends of the disturbers at once gave "boats" went out of the dining-room considerably quicker than they entered. to make out of the city without delay, But still they lingered near, and subsequently visited the kitchen and made was heeded, and the fellows, who are improper advances towards some of the female employes of the hotel. The clerk was notified, and summoning a squad of porters he attacked the obnexious bunnmers and put them to flight down the front stairs, and following them up a lively row occurred, of which we made a slight mention in yesterday's The interference of Marshal Haworth prevented any bloodshed on either side, and relieved the clerk and his aid-de-camps of the task of driving off the obnoxious "beats." The Marshal conducted his two prisoners to Justice Hughes' court, where they were tried on the charge of disturbance. They gave their names as Jones and M. Callman, All the testimony necessary to convict them was introduced in a few moments, and at its conclusion the defendants commenced to argue why they should not be fined, taking up almost an hour's time in uscless lifte talk. The Justice was not impressed with these speeches, and he assessed on each a flue of $10 and costs. Both could not show more than ten conts; and the Justice at once busied himself at making out the papers necessary to imprison them in the calaboose. Apparently greatly affected, they related a sad story of their imprisonment in that "horrible calaboose" over one Sunday, and averred that another "jugging" would be certain death to thom. Seeing that they had again made no improssion, they greatly amused the crowd of spectators by meekly requesting that their coffins should be taken to their cells so that they might lay down to take their last sleep, and thus subject no one to the trouble of enclosing them in the "narrow house." This conduct and language, seemingly so carnest, occasioned considerable merriment among the spectators, until Marshal Haworth led them off to the city enlaboose.
